

A case of mistaken identity...

I purchased a few seeds from you online. As soon as I received the seeds they were planted in my greenhouse and I named them all as I finished.

One packet of seeds I glanced at quickly (without my glasses).

It read "Large Red" and I assumed they were tomatoes. A few weeks went by and I noticed they had rather big leaves but just put it down to them being a large variety.

Suddenly they became huge and it was quite clear they were not tomatoes so revisited my online order. They were in fact Large Red Tamarillo seeds and I now had 30 Tamarillo plants.

Fortunately we have a large property and I have managed to plant a few and given the rest away to friends and family.
